

Bedroom

260 litres of oil paint on floor, walls and ceiling on the inside of a room constructed in accordance with prevailing building standards. The room is an assembled construction kit in eight parts designed by an architect, and is based on the exact measurements of the artist's own bedroom. The paint consists of four separate red colours of varying degrees of thickness and modes of application. Together the colours represent the varying phases of an intimate personal relationship.